of Barbary, Jesnera &c. During the latter half of his life he was a great sufferer from botanical information his troubles, among others extraordinary tenderness to pinches and dislocation of the limbs did not avail his powerful work. Dr Marcus Plantarum. 1601. and Exoticorum libri decem 1605. contained his most important results. A few more accounts from early journals and Portuguese travellers of animals, flowers and drugs. His diligence was often rewarded by seeking and highly curious facts. (Dict)

Miall. The early naturalists (1530-1789)
p. 7 London 1912.